

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT TACOMA

GAIL ANDERSON,

Plaintiff,

V.

CAROLYN W. COLVIN, Acting
Commissioner of Social Security,

Defendant.

Case No. 3:14-cv-05696-KLS

ORDER AFFIRMING DEFENDANT'S DECISION TO DENY BENEFITS

Plaintiff has brought this matter for judicial review of defendant's denial of her application for supplemental security income ("SSI") benefits. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), Local Rule of Civil Procedure 73 and Local Rule MJR 13, the parties have consented to have the matter heard by the undersigned Magistrate Judge. After reviewing the parties' briefs and the hearing record, the Court hereby finds that for the reasons set forth below, defendant's denial of benefits should be affirmed.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 15, 2006, plaintiff filed an application for SSI benefits, alleging disability as of January 1, 2005. See Dkt. 9, Administrative Record (“AR”) 325. In a decision dated September 1, 2009, an administrative law judge found the claimant not disabled, and plaintiff

ORDER - 1

1 appealed this decision. See id. On May 17, 2012, this Court issued an order reversing the 2 decision and remanding the case for further administrative proceedings, finding the 3 administrative law judge improperly concluded the claimant was not disabled. See AR 365-381.
4 Pursuant to the order, the Appeals Council (“AC”) vacated the September 1, 2009 decision and 5 directed an administrative law judge to offer the claimant an opportunity for a hearing, take any 6 further action needed to complete the administrative record, and issue a new decision. See AR 7 384.

8 A new hearing was held before a different administrative law judge (“the ALJ”) on 9 February 21, 2013, at which plaintiff, represented by counsel, appeared and testified, as did a 10 vocational expert. See AR 343-64. On April 11, 2013, the ALJ issued a recommended decision, 11 determining plaintiff to be not disabled. See AR 323-42. In a final decision dated July 2, 2014, 12 the AC reviewed additional evidence and argument submitted by plaintiff and found plaintiff to 13 be not disabled from her application date through the date of the ALJ’s recommended 14 unfavorable decision. See AR 306-19.

15 The Commissioner “is empowered to affirm, modify or reverse the ALJ’s decision. Such 16 decision then becomes final and is binding upon the parties unless review is sought in district 17 court.” Taylor v. Heckler, 765 F.2d 872, 875 (9th Cir. 1985). Where the AC modifies an ALJ’s 18 decision, the task of this Court “is to review the decision of the Appeals Council under the 19 substantial evidence standard, not the decision of the ALJ.” Howard v. Heckler, 782 F.2d 1484, 20 1487 (9th Cir. 1986). This Court has statutory jurisdiction to review “any final decision of the 21 Commissioner of Social Security made after a hearing.” 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). Here, the AC 22 decision of July 2, 2014, issued after plaintiff’s February 21, 2013 hearing is “the final decision 23 of the Commissioner of Social Security.” AR 306.

26 ORDER - 2

1 On September 3, 2014, plaintiff filed a complaint in this Court seeking judicial review of 2 the Commissioner's final decision. See Dkt. 1. The administrative record was filed with the 3 Court on November 7, 2014. See Dkt. 9. The parties have completed their briefing, and thus this 4 matter is now ripe for the Court's review.

5 Plaintiff argues defendant's decision to deny benefits should be reversed and remanded 6 for an award of benefits, because the AC erred: (1) in evaluating the medical evidence in the 7 record; (2) in discounting plaintiff's credibility; (3) in rejecting the lay witness evidence in the 8 record; and (4) in assessing plaintiff's residual functional capacity ("RFC"). For the reasons set 9 forth below, the undersigned disagrees that the ALJ erred in determining plaintiff to be not 10 disabled, and therefore recommends that defendant's decision to deny benefits be affirmed.

12 DISCUSSION

13 The determination of the Commissioner that a claimant is not disabled must be upheld by 14 the Court, if the "proper legal standards" have been applied by the Commissioner, and the 15 "substantial evidence in the record as a whole supports" that determination. Hoffman v. Heckler, 16 785 F.2d 1423, 1425 (9th Cir. 1986); see also Batson v. Commissioner of Social Security Admin., 17 359 F.3d 1190, 1193 (9th Cir. 2004); Carr v. Sullivan, 772 F.Supp. 522, 525 (E.D. Wash. 1991) 18 ("A decision supported by substantial evidence will, nevertheless, be set aside if the proper legal 19 standards were not applied in weighing the evidence and making the decision.") (citing Brawner 20 v. Secretary of Health and Human Services, 839 F.2d 432, 433 (9th Cir. 1987)).
21

22 Substantial evidence is "such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as 23 adequate to support a conclusion." Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971) (citation 24 omitted); see also Batson, 359 F.3d at 1193 ("[T]he Commissioner's findings are upheld if 25 supported by inferences reasonably drawn from the record."). "The substantial evidence test 26

1 requires that the reviewing court determine" whether the Commissioner's decision is "supported 2 by more than a scintilla of evidence, although less than a preponderance of the evidence is 3 required." Sorenson v. Weinberger, 514 F.2d 1112, 1119 n.10 (9th Cir. 1975). "If the evidence 4 admits of more than one rational interpretation," the Commissioner's decision must be upheld.
 5 Allen v. Heckler, 749 F.2d 577, 579 (9th Cir. 1984) ("Where there is conflicting evidence 6 sufficient to support either outcome, we must affirm the decision actually made.") (quoting 7 Rhinehart v. Finch, 438 F.2d 920, 921 (9th Cir. 1971)).¹

9 I. The AC's Evaluation of the Medical Evidence in the Record

10 Defendant employs a five-step "sequential evaluation process" to determine whether a 11 claimant is disabled. See 20 C.F.R. § 416.920. If the claimant is found disabled or not disabled at 12 any particular step thereof, the disability determination is made at that step, and the sequential 13 evaluation process ends. See id. At step two of the evaluation process, the Commissioner must 14 determine if an impairment is "severe." 20 C.F.R. § 416.920. An impairment is "not severe" if it 15 does not "significantly limit" a claimant's mental or physical abilities to do basic work activities.
 16 20 C.F.R. § 416.920(a)(4)(iii), (c); see also Social Security Ruling ("SSR") 96-3p, 1996 WL
 17 374181 *1. Basic work activities are those "abilities and aptitudes necessary to do most jobs." 20 18 C.F.R. § 416.921(b); SSR 85-28, 1985 WL 56856 *3.

 23 ¹ As the Ninth Circuit has further explained:

24 . . . It is immaterial that the evidence in a case would permit a different conclusion than that 25 which the [Commissioner] reached. If the [Commissioner]'s findings are supported by 26 substantial evidence, the courts are required to accept them. It is the function of the [Commissioner], and not the court's to resolve conflicts in the evidence. While the court may not try the case de novo, neither may it abdicate its traditional function of review. It must scrutinize the record as a whole to determine whether the [Commissioner]'s conclusions are rational. If they are . . . they must be upheld.

Sorenson, 514 F.2d at 1119 n.10.

ORDER - 4

1 An impairment is not severe only if the evidence establishes a slight abnormality that has 2 “no more than a minimal effect on an individual[’]s ability to work.” SSR 85-28, 1985 WL
3 56856 *3; see also Smolen v. Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1290 (9th Cir. 1996); Yuckert v. Bowen, 841 4 F.2d 303, 306 (9th Cir. 1988). Plaintiff has the burden of proving that her “impairments or their 5 symptoms affect her ability to perform basic work activities.” Edlund v. Massanari, 253 F.3d 6 1152, 1159-60 (9th Cir. 2001); Tidwell v. Apfel, 161 F.3d 599, 601 (9th Cir. 1998). The step two 7 inquiry described above, however, is a de minimis screening device used to dispose of groundless 8 claims. See Smolen, 80 F.3d at 1290.

10 To be determined to have a disability, plaintiff must further establish that she is unable to 11 “to engage in any substantial gainful activity” due to the medically determinable impairment, 12 “which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a 13 continuous period of not less than 12 months.” 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A); Tackett v. Apfel, 180 14 F.3d 1094, 1098 (9th Cir. 1999). Not only must the impairment itself last or be expected to last 15 for 12 months, but those work-related limitations stemming therefrom alleged to be disabling 16 also must last for the requisite time period. See Barnhart v. Walton, 535 U.S. 212, 217-222 17 (2002) (upholding defendant’s interpretation of Social Security Act’s definition of “disability” as 18 requiring that both medically determinable impairment and resulting inability to engage in 19 substantial gainful activity must last for “not less than 12 months”); Carmickle v. Commissioner 20 Soc. Sec. Admin., 533 F.3d 1155, 1165 (9th Cir. 2008) (upholding decision by ALJ to give 21 physician’s opinion regarding inability to tolerate sedentary or light work “little weight” in 22 assessing claimant’s “long-term functioning” in light of that physician’s decision two months 23 later to release claimant to full-time work).

24
25 ORDER - 5
26

1 The ALJ is responsible for determining credibility and resolving ambiguities and 2 conflicts in the medical evidence. See Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 722 (9th Cir. 1998).
3 Where the medical evidence in the record is not conclusive, “questions of credibility and 4 resolution of conflicts” are solely the functions of the ALJ. Sample v. Schweiker, 694 F.2d 639, 5 642 (9th Cir. 1982). In such cases, “the ALJ’s conclusion must be upheld.” Morgan v.
6 Commissioner of the Social Security Admin., 169 F.3d 595, 601 (9th Cir. 1999). Determining 7 whether inconsistencies in the medical evidence “are material (or are in fact inconsistencies at 8 all) and whether certain factors are relevant to discount” the opinions of medical experts “falls 9 within this responsibility.” Id. at 603.

10 11 In resolving questions of credibility and conflicts in the evidence, an ALJ’s findings 12 “must be supported by specific, cogent reasons.” Reddick, 157 F.3d at 725. The ALJ can do this 13 “by setting out a detailed and thorough summary of the facts and conflicting clinical evidence, 14 stating his interpretation thereof, and making findings.” Id. The ALJ also may draw inferences 15 “logically flowing from the evidence.” Sample, 694 F.2d at 642. Further, the Court itself may 16 draw “specific and legitimate inferences from the ALJ’s opinion.” Magallanes v. Bowen, 881 17 F.2d 747, 755, (9th Cir. 1989).

18
19 The ALJ must provide “clear and convincing” reasons for rejecting the uncontradicted 20 opinion of either a treating or examining physician. Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir.
21 1996). Even when a treating or examining physician’s opinion is contradicted, that opinion “can 22 only be rejected for specific and legitimate reasons that are supported by substantial evidence in 23 the record.” Id. at 830-31. However, the ALJ “need not discuss all evidence presented” to him or 24 her. Vincent on Behalf of Vincent v. Heckler, 739 F.2d 1393, 1394-95 (9th Cir. 1984) (citation 25 omitted) (emphasis in original). The ALJ must only explain why “significant probative evidence 26

1 has been rejected.” Id.; see also Cotter v. Harris, 642 F.2d 700, 706-07 (3rd Cir. 1981); Garfield
 2 v. Schweiker, 732 F.2d 605, 610 (7th Cir. 1984).

3 In general, more weight is given to a treating physician’s opinion than to the opinions of 4 those who do not treat the claimant. See Lester, 81 F.3d at 830. On the other hand, an ALJ need 5 not accept the opinion of a treating physician, “if that opinion is brief, conclusory, and 6 inadequately supported by clinical findings” or “by the record as a whole.” Batson, 359 F.3d at 7 1195; see also Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 947, 957 (9th Cir. 2002); Tonapetyan v. Halter, 8 242 F.3d 1144, 1149 (9th Cir. 2001). An examining physician’s opinion is “entitled to greater 9 weight than the opinion of a nonexamining physician.” Lester, 81 F.3d at 830-31. A non-10 examining physician’s opinion may constitute substantial evidence if “it is consistent with other 11 independent evidence in the record.” Id. at 830-31; Tonapetyan, 242 F.3d at 1149.

13 a. Plaintiff’s carpal tunnel syndrome

14 Here, the AC adopted the ALJ’s decision that plaintiff’s carpal tunnel syndrome (“CTS”) 15 was not a severe impairment because any limitations to work activities were not severe and it had 16 not been present or expected to be present for 12 months. See AR 310, 315, 333-34. Substantial 17 evidence supports the AC’s finding that plaintiff did not meet her burden. As noted by the AC, 18 plaintiff was diagnosed with CTS in her right hand in October of 2012 and underwent release 19 surgery in February of 2013 to relieve symptoms and improve functioning. See AR 795, 820. In 20 July of 2013, plaintiff’s treating physician stated that plaintiff’s “hands were fine” and that she 21 had no limitations in fingering, handling, or feeling. AR 839.

22 Plaintiff argues that a treating physician’s note from February of 2013 stating she “had 23 pain and paresthesias in both hands for about a year” indicates the duration requirement was met.
 24 See AR 819. However, this note alone does not provide any evidence that these symptoms

1 actually affected plaintiff's ability to perform basic work-related activities. See Ukolov v.
2 Barnhart, 420 F.3d 1002, 1005 (9th Cir. 2005) (symptoms alone are not sufficient to establish a 3 medically determinable impairment). Neither are a finding of associated tendonitis or a positive 4 Phalen's test sufficient evidence of work-related limitations. See AR 500, 819. Plaintiff also 5 argues the AC did not address the CTS in her left hand; however, both plaintiff herself and her 6 physicians described any impairment in her left hand as only mild. See AR 347, 795. Lastly, 7 plaintiff argues that this condition, even if not severe, must be considered in assessing her RFC.
8 The AC expressly did so, however, accounting for all limitations supported by the medical 9 evidence, including adding push and pull restrictions. See AR 315-16. Therefore, the AC did not 10 err in determining plaintiff's CTS not to be a severe impairment lasting 12 months.

12 b. Dr. Hamill

13 Plaintiff argues that the AC erred by failing to provide proper reasons for giving only 14 partial weight to the opinions of treating physician John Hamill, M.D. Specifically, she asserts 15 the AC isolated only the medical evidence in the record that supports its decision and then took 16 that evidence out of context. As an example of this, plaintiff points to a May 2009 chart note, in 17 which Dr. Hamill stated that he thought her limitations to be "substantial", that any improvement 18 she would see from "an aggressive rehabilitative program" was "limited", that "from an 19 economic standpoint" it was hard to think "of a good job that she would be able to do well within 20 the limits," and that "[f]urther testing with a true physical capacity evaluation for more objective 21 testing may be helpful and warranted." AR 588.

22 To the extent any error was committed by the AC in not expressly discussing this chart 23 note, the Court finds it to be harmless. See Stout v. Comm'r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 454 F.3d 1050, 24 1055 (9th Cir. 2006) (error harmless where it is non-prejudicial to claimant or irrelevant to ALJ's

1 ultimate disability conclusion); Parra v. Astrue, 481 F.3d 742, 747 (9th Cir. 2007) (finding any 2 error on part of ALJ would not have affected “ALJ’s ultimate decision.”). First, Dr. Hamill gave 3 no indication what specific limitations he believed to be substantial. Second, as the AC points 4 out, Dr. Hamill’s statement that further objective testing may be helpful and warranted indicates 5 he “was not certain of [plaintiff’s] true capabilities and limitations.” AR 314. This interpretation 6 of Dr. Hamill’s opinion is reasonable, and therefore will not be overturned.

8 Plaintiff also points to an early April 2009 chart note, in which Dr. Hamill assessed her 9 with hyperlipidemia and diabetes – noting them to be “stable, but not ideally controlled,” – as 10 well as chronic pain, all of which would be addressed with medication. AR 287. However, these 11 statements say nothing about any actual work-related functional limitations, let alone the severity 12 thereof. Plaintiff also objects to the fact that the AC fails to mention diagnostic testing perform 13 after 2009, but again fails to show how any of that evidence indicates the presence of limitations 14 more restrictive than those already assessed by the AC. See Dkt. 18, pp. 7-8 (citing AR 606, 612, 15 615, 620); Matthews v. Shalala, 10 F.3d 678, 680 (9th Cir. 1993) (“The mere existence of an 16 impairment is insufficient proof of a disability”); Higgs v. Bowen, 880 F.2d 860, 863 (6th Cir.
 17 1988) (noting “[t]he mere diagnosis of [an impairment] . . . says nothing about the severity of the 18 [diagnosed] condition,” and upholding finding of non-severity where medical reports were silent 19 as to any limitations that may stem from that impairment).
 20

21 Plaintiff further argues that diagnostic testing supports the limitations on sitting, standing 22 and walking Dr. Hamill assessed in July 2013. As noted by the AC, however, those limitations 23 were assessed soon after plaintiff had surgery, a fact expressly acknowledged by Dr. Hamill, 24 who noted plaintiff was “currently recovering from surgery.” AR 839. The ALJ discounted these 25 limitations on the basis that “there is no indication how long such limitations were expected to 26

1 last" (AR 314), which given plaintiff's recent surgery was reasonable and proper. AR 314; see 2 Tackett v. Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1098 (9th Cir. 1999) (claimant must show he or she suffers 3 from medically determinable impairment that can be expected to result in death or that has lasted 4 or can be expected to last for continuous period of not less than twelve months).

5 c. Dr. Nakashima

6 The AC gave partial weight to the opinion of treating rheumatologist, James Nakashima, 7 M.D., because he treated plaintiff for less time than Dr. Hamill, and because of conflicts between 8 Dr. Nakashima 's opinion that plaintiff could perform sedentary work and his earlier opinion that 9 she was more limited than that. See AR 314. Plaintiff correctly argues the mere fact that Dr.
 10 Nakashima treated plaintiff for a lesser amount of time is not alone a valid basis for discrediting 11 his more restrictive opinion, especially considering he examined plaintiff multiple times over a 12 year and a half. Nevertheless, the Court finds this error to be harmless, given that the AC gave 13 another valid reason for discrediting Dr. Nakashima's more restrictive opinion.

14 Dr. Nakashima found plaintiff's overall work level to be "severely limited" in December 15 of 2007, and to be subject to certain additional functional restrictions. AR 272. In October 2008, 16 however, Dr. Nakashima reported improvements in plaintiff's functioning, such that she was 17 capable of working at the "sedentary" level, again with certain additional functional restrictions.
 18 AR 265. Given that "[a] treating physician's most recent medical reports are highly probative," 19 the AC did not err in finding Dr. Nakashima's earlier more restrictive assessment to be 20 inconsistent with his more recent one, and therefore less probative. See AR 314; Osenbrock v.
 21 Apfel, 240 F.3d 1157, 1165 (9th Cir. 2001); Sample, 694 F.2d at 642; Morgan, 169 F.3d at 601.

22 II. The AC's Assessment of Plaintiff's Credibility

23 Questions of credibility are solely within the control of the trier of fact. See Sample v.

1 Schweiker, 694 F.2d 639, 642 (9th Cir. 1982). The Court should not “second-guess” this 2 credibility determination. Allen, 749 F.2d at 580. In addition, the Court may not reverse a 3 credibility determination where that determination is based on contradictory or ambiguous 4 evidence. See id. at 579. That some of the reasons for discrediting a claimant’s testimony should 5 properly be discounted does not render the Commissioner’s determination invalid, as long as that 6 determination is supported by substantial evidence. Tonapetyan, 242 F.3d at 1148.

8 To reject a claimant’s subjective complaints, the Commissioner must provide “specific, 9 cogent reasons for the disbelief.” Lester, 81 F.3d at 834 (citation omitted). The Commissioner 10 “must identify what testimony is not credible and what evidence undermines the claimant’s 11 complaints.” Id.; see also Dodrill v. Shalala, 12 F.3d 915, 918 (9th Cir. 1993). Unless 12 affirmative evidence shows the claimant is malingering, the Commissioner’s reasons for 13 rejecting the claimant’s testimony must be “clear and convincing.” Lester, 81 F.2d at 834. The 14 evidence as a whole must support a finding of malingering. See O’Donnell v. Barnhart, 318 F.3d 15 811, 818 (8th Cir. 2003).

17 In determining a claimant’s credibility, the Commissioner may consider “ordinary 18 techniques of credibility evaluation,” such as reputation for lying, prior inconsistent statements 19 concerning symptoms, and other testimony that “appears less than candid.” Smolen v. Chater, 80 20 F.3d 1273, 1284 (9th Cir. 1996). The Commissioner also may consider a claimant’s work record 21 and observations of physicians and other third parties regarding the nature, onset, duration, and 22 frequency of symptoms. See id.

24 Plaintiff argues that the AC erred by failing to make specific findings stating clear and 25 convincing reasons for rejecting plaintiff’s testimony regarding the severity of her symptoms.
 26 See Dkt. 18, pp. 11-18. The AC found plaintiff not to be fully credible for several reasons:

1 inconsistency with daily activities, inconsistency with statements from plaintiff's mother, 2 inconsistency with the medical evidence, lack of work history, and dishonesty about substance 3 abuse.² See AR 316.

4 First, the Court finds the AC properly discounted plaintiff's testimony regarding her 5 subjective complaints because of its inconsistency with the medical evidence in the record. As 6 discussed above, the AC properly determined that evidence did not support greater limitations 7 than those included in its RFC assessment. It is true that a claimant's pain testimony may not be 8 rejected "solely because the degree of pain alleged is not supported by objective medical 9 evidence." Orteza v. Shalala, 50 F.3d 748, 749-50 (9th Cir. 1995) (quoting Bunnell v. Sullivan, 10 947 F.2d 341, 346-47 (9th Cir. 1991) (en banc) (emphasis added); see also Rollins v.
 11 Massanari, 261 F.3d 853, 856 (9th Cir. 2001); Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 597, 601 (9th Cir. 1989).
 12 However, the AC provided further valid reasons for finding plaintiff not to be credible.

14 For example, plaintiff's credibility was properly discounted due to the lack of a 15 significant work history and dishonesty about drug use. See AR 375-76. Plaintiff argues these 16 reasons are not clear and convincing, because diagnostic tests have shown why she could not 17 work at least since the filing of her application for disability benefits, and because she has not 18 failed any drug screen since she last did so in 2007. However, plaintiff's argument still fails to 19 address why she does not have an extensive work history prior to the alleged onset date of her 20 disability. See Thomas, 278 F.3d at 959 (ALJ properly found extremely poor work history and

 23² Defendant asserts that the doctrine of the law of the case should apply here, arguing that plaintiff was already 24 found not to be credible in this Court's previous order and the issue should not be reopened. See Dkt. 22, pp. 15-19.
 25 Application of the doctrine of the law of the case is discretionary. Merritt v. Mackey, 932 F.2d 1317, 1320 (9th Cir.
 26 1991) (doctrine merely expresses practice of courts generally to refuse to reopen that which has been decided, and is not limitation of courts' power). Given that the AC itself addressed the credibility issue and in light of the fact that applying the doctrine here would not serve the public policy behind it – i.e., the need to stop endless litigation (see Old Person v. Brown, 312 F.3d 1036, 1039 (9th Cir. 2002)) – the Court declines to apply it. Still, regardless of its applicability, as discussed below the AC gave valid reasons for discounting plaintiff's credibility.

1 lack of propensity to work in lifetime negatively affected claimant's credibility regarding her 2 inability to work). Also, plaintiff's argument that she has not been found to be dishonest about 3 drug use since her last failed drug screen, does not negate the fact that she has a history of lying 4 and being less than candid. See Smolen, 80 F.3d at 1284.

5 Accordingly, although the other reasons the AC provided for discounting plaintiff's 6 credibility may not have been proper, this does not render the AC's credibility determination 7 invalid, because it provided other valid reasons for doing so that are supported by substantial 8 evidence in the record. Tonapetyan, 242 F.3d at 1148; see Bray v. Commissioner of Social Sec.
 9 Admin., 554 F.3d 1219, 1227 (9th Cir. 2009) (while ALJ relied on improper reason for 10 discounting claimant's credibility, he presented other valid, independent bases for doing so, each 11 with "ample support in the record").

12 III. The AC's Evaluation of the Lay Witness Evidence in the Record

13 Plaintiff argues that the AC erred by failing either to credit the limitations found in a 14 statement by Wilma Anderson, plaintiff's mother, or to offer germane reasons to discredit it. The 15 AC did not determine the credibility of Ms. Anderson's statement or discuss its incorporation 16 into the RFC.³ This omission is error. See Bruce v. Astrue, 557 F.3d 1113, 1115 (9th Cir. 2009) 17 (lay testimony concerning claimant's ability to work is competent evidence and cannot be 18 disregarded without comment). However, this error is harmless.

19 Plaintiff argues that had the statement been credited, the AC would need to incorporate 20 the functional limitations the statement implies into its RFC. However, plaintiff fails to argue 21 with any specificity what functional limitations implied by the statement have been rejected or 22 ignored. See Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 1161 n.2 (reviewing court need not address issues not

 26 ³ The AC does discuss Ms. Anderson's statement but only in the context of determining plaintiff's credibility. See AR 316.

1 argued with any specificity in the briefing). Furthermore, the RFC assessed by the AC is not 2 inconsistent with the limitations described in Ms. Anderson's statement. The greatest limitations 3 in Ms. Anderson's statement are that plaintiff can only walk one block without resting, cannot do 4 house or yard work, cannot lift more than 25 pounds, and may take all day to do laundry. See AR
5 76-84. These limitations are not inconsistent with the AC's restriction to sedentary-level work 6 with additional restrictions including limitations on lifting, walking, and pushing or pulling. See 7 AR 317. Therefore, any error in not discussing Ms. Anderson's testimony is harmless, as it 8 would not have affected the disability determination. See Molina, 674 F.3d at 1115.

10 IV. The AC's Assessment of Plaintiff's Residual Functional Capacity

11 Defendant employs a five-step "sequential evaluation process" to determine whether a 12 claimant is disabled. See 20 C.F.R. § 416.920. If the claimant is found disabled or not disabled at 13 any particular step thereof, the disability determination is made at that step, and the sequential 14 evaluation process ends. See id. If a disability determination "cannot be made on the basis of 15 medical factors alone at step three of that process," the Commissioner must identify the 16 claimant's "functional limitations and restrictions" and assess his or her "remaining capacities 17 for work-related activities." Social Security Ruling ("SSR") 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184 *2. A 18 claimant's RFC assessment is used at step four to determine whether he or she can do his or her 19 past relevant work, and at step five to determine whether he or she can do other work. See id.

21 Residual functional capacity thus is what the claimant "can still do despite his or her 22 limitations." Id. It is the maximum amount of work the claimant is able to perform based on all 23 of the relevant evidence in the record. See id. However, an inability to work must result from the 24 claimant's "physical or mental impairment(s)." Id. Thus, the Commissioner must consider only 25 those limitations and restrictions "attributable to medically determinable impairments." Id. In 26

1 assessing a claimant's RFC, the Commissioner also is required to discuss why the claimant's 2 "symptom-related functional limitations and restrictions can or cannot reasonably be accepted as 3 consistent with the medical or other evidence." Id. at *7.

4 Here, the AC found plaintiff had the RFC to perform:

5 . . . sedentary work as defined in 20 CFR 416.967(a), with the capacity to 6 occasionally lift and carry 10 pounds occasionally and less than 10 pounds 7 frequently; work requiring overhead reaching bilaterally should be avoided; 8 standing or walking no more than 2 hours in an 8-hour workday, sitting up to 6 9 total hours in an 8-hour workday and must be permitted to alternate between 10 sitting and standing at will; no climbing of ladders, ropes or scaffolding.
 11 Additionally, the claimant is limited to occasionally twisting, rarely stooping or 12 crouching, and occasionally pushing and pulling with both arms.

13 AR 317. Plaintiff argues that given the AC's harmful errors alleged above, the RFC assessed by 14 the AC is incomplete. Because as discussed above the AC did not commit any harmful error, 15 here too the AC did not err.

16 VII. The AC's Findings at Step Five

17 If a claimant cannot perform his or her past relevant work, at step five of the disability 18 evaluation process the Commissioner must show there are a significant number of jobs in the 19 national economy the claimant is able to do. See Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1098-99; 20 C.F.R. § 20 416.920(d), (e). This can be established through the testimony of a vocational expert or by 21 reference to defendant's Medical-Vocational Guidelines (the "Grids"). Osenbrock, 240 F.3d at 22 1162; Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1100-1101.

23 The Commissioner's findings will be upheld if the weight of the medical evidence 24 supports the hypothetical posed. See Martinez v. Heckler, 807 F.2d 771, 774 (9th Cir. 1987); 25 Gallant v. Heckler, 753 F.2d 1450, 1456 (9th Cir. 1984). The vocational expert's testimony 26 therefore must be reliable in light of the medical evidence to qualify as substantial evidence. See Embrey v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 422 (9th Cir. 1988). Accordingly, the description of the ORDER - 15

1 claimant's disability given to the vocational expert "must be accurate, detailed, and supported by 2 the medical record." Id. (citations omitted). The ALJ, however, may omit from that description 3 those limitations he or she finds do not exist. See Rollins, 261 F.3d at 857.

4 Here at step five, the AC found plaintiff to be capable of performing other jobs existing 5 in significant numbers in the national economy, based on the testimony of the vocational expert 6 provided in response to a hypothetical questions in turn based on substantially similar functional 7 limitations as were included in the ALJ's RFC assessment. See AR 317, 328, 336. Plaintiff 8 asserts that in light of Dr. Hamill's July 2013 opinion, the AC's step five determination is 9 erroneous. But as discussed above, the AC properly discounted that opinion. Plaintiff also faults 10 the AC for simply using the Grids to find her capable of performing other jobs. But the AC did 11 no such thing, instead expressly relying on the testimony of the vocational expert to so find. See 12 AR 317. Thus, no error has been shown in regard to the AC's step five determination.
13

14 CONCLUSION

15 Based on the foregoing discussion, the Court hereby finds the ALJ properly concluded 16 plaintiff was not disabled. Accordingly, defendant's decision to deny benefits is AFFIRMED.
